☒ This CME activity has been reviewed for the presence of conflicts-of-interest and none were identified.

The following recommendations have been made to the speaker(s), author(s), planner(s) and/or reviewer(s):

- Although there may occasionally be important reasons for referring to a drug, device or other product by its proprietary (brand) name, in general a product should be referred to by its generic name.
- If reference is made to the use of a drug, device or other product for a purpose for which it has not been approved ("off-label"), or for which it has been approved for investigational use only, the product should be clearly identified as such.

Commercial support [☐ has or ☒ has not] been accepted for this CME activity.
